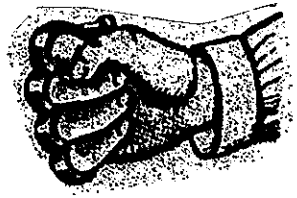
I wish, said the hedgehog, that the world had learned to be kind.

There are blades of grass no one has seen, waving in wind no one has felt. The whole planet is wide with wonder.

But you fight and hate and greet what you do not understand with a fist, and you see nothing.



I wish, said the hedgehog.

I wish.

my heart is not for sale.

I gave it too freely.

my heart's just pieces a shadow, shell.

So, I can't love you.

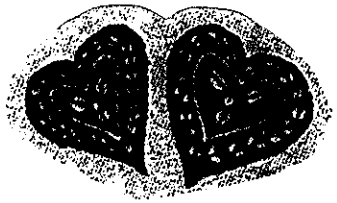
& Survive ALA Annual



I'm thinking a lot about the people who cannot be here. Libraries that can't afford to pay for ALA staff memberships. People in prison. I'm trying to figure out what it means to be a truly "progressive" librarian - not just fighting for libraries and librarianship, but fighting for holistic justice - economic, gender, racial - for all we serve.
