Who knows.

In this fucking world, I'm the only stupid. I lost my way, I lost my aim. Dumbest person alive. Let's just forget all of this, let's just laugh through all of this. Because this contest is meaningless. on my way back home I get choked up. Keep feeling like crying, wah-oh-oh, oh. I just wanna find myself before I disappear completely. when I was young and watched cartoons, I wondered why I couldn't be the main character like I would see. My heart's all too blackened. Isn't there anyone who I can trade their heart with mine for a day?"

- RIDE A TRAIN (ELEVATED)
- GO SEE TERRY AT THIRD COAST COMICS
- EAT SOME GOOD FOOD: MEXICAN, CHINESE, VIETNAMESE, ETHIOPIAN OR MORE!

Once upon a time, there was a leaf. Its life began in the spring, as the animals lifted their heads from hibernation, yawned, and prepared for the year ahead. The leaf started from a bud, which started from a branch. It unfurled, getting a first glance at its world; the forest, the grass, and the sky. It looked around at its friends; the leaves, the blossoms, and the birds. It looked at the world with love

Summer brought a beautiful adventure. The leaf danced in the wind, taking in its world. It delighted in the squirls and foxes below, the lucky life it had been born into, the lush green of the world.

Autumn was swift and sudden. Soon, lush green was warm orange, and the leaf ~~turned brittle and~~ was confused. It watched as its friends turned, as some... fell. From its ~~[illegible]~~ perch, it saw it all. And it was horrified. It mourned what ~~[illegible]~~ had been.

Winter was lonely. Leaf after leaf fell. Friend after friend fell dormant. Soon the world turned dark and quiet, the leaf gray and brittle. And when the wind came to sweep it away, the leaf [illegible]
