Me

Yeah. Why don't British people sing with an accent?

Third Grader

Growing up, the library was my afterschool hang-out of choice. To be honest, it was my only choice, as my parents didn't want me anywhere else. I was lucky because my friends were pretty OK with this and we would all hang out together.

One day, as we were sitting around, a classmate of ours walks in. He seems pretty out there, and is talking to himself. He's starting to make a scene, so we go outside, where he proceeds to climb the street lamp and swing around. and around. and around.

To this day, we still joke about it. No idea what prompted it.

What can I say? Teenagers.

I met my fiancé at the library (he was choosing his own adventure) And 1.5 years later he proposed at a library!

Knowing A Pothole

One route, one road
routinely taken.

Under a bridge,
frost action creates
a pit for poor tires.

No matter our familiarity,
it excels at sneaking up.

Blessed are you, pothole.
and blessed is the fruit
of thy womb, axle repair.

AS A DIGITAL LITERACY LIBRARIAN, I GET TO HELP ALOT of PEOPLE PROGRAM THEIR PHONES.

HENCE, I GET TOO SEE THE NAUGHTY PICTURES THEY'VE TAKEN.

OH MY!

OOPS!

"I once brought a bottle of water into the library. (It's a no-no!) I hid the bottle under my chair while I read. I forgot about the bottle and knocked it over by accident. It rolled, and rolled, and rolled, and rolled out from under the tables, out into the main floor area and rolled out through the turnstile and down the stairs! (I guess H_2O is too cool to read books!)"

I meet people of all kinds in the library but my favorite was an eccentric old man who claimed to know the king of Portugal. Every time he saw me, he gave me an abstract pastel drawing he made.

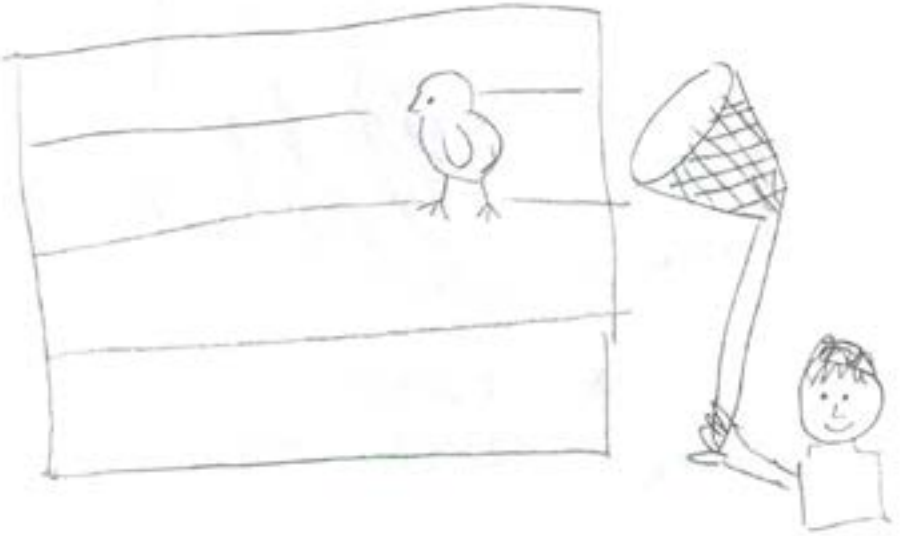
A Bird in the Library!



To meet to ask night
off the bat, I wandered aimlessly. Silly me.

I gathered my courage to ask for help finding my favorite book.

I walked in circles for some time while

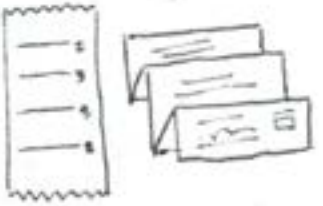
When I worked in a children's library, I would find all sorts of weird items stuck between pages...

Money

cards



financial info

food wrappers

mysterious stains??

I always felt bad for people who lost these things (well, except for the stains). I liked to imagine who left the items and what they are doing now.

Lost in the Library...
No notions of reading
happened to be...
presently apparent
to little ol' me.

So, lost in the Library...
for two hours of time, I shelved and I shelved, books
that were not mine.

The last book I lifted
revealed a key to me.
It unlocked the front
door and let me go free.

"What time are we upon and where do I belong?"

were the only words running through my head, as I stood before my middle school author crush, Francesca Lia Block, outside of the YA Author Coffee Klatch at ALA 2013. I stuttered for a moment but could only seem to utter the words "I love you. Can I hug you?" before a swarm of other fans mobbed her. Imagine my awe when I saw her tiny, pixie self in line for the women's room when I was on my way out — Did I wait outside so I could gush more and have my photo taken — OF COURSE I did. Who wouldn't?

And she's so cool. She wrote a book on publishing zines, you know in my MIDDLE SCHOOL LIBRARY in the year 2000,

I found a book about SPACE written before THE MOON landing!

Restless in the Library

When I was a child, I would find myself doodling ... in the library, I would doodle in the margains of the books I was reading.

Now, every once in a while, I'll see a childs doodle in a blank margin + know the reason they doodled is because they felt just like I did ... restless, bored, creative & tired of reading.

MY COWORKERS ONCE HAD TO DEAL WITH A PARENT WHO ALLOWED THEIR CHILD TO POOP ON THE FLOOR. TO BE PRECISE... THEY HAD TO DEAL WITH THE POOP.

Creeping creeping into the stacks, I was just little and I wanted to

it's the feeling of a sigh and a world opening up and all of the times that I found a place to go.

WHEN I WAS 5,

I CHOSE MY OWN ADVENTURE.

AND KILLED A GUY.
