Barnard Zine Library

Barnard's zines are primarily in the area of women's studies, featuring personal and political publications on activism, anarchism, body image, feminism, gender, lesbians, menstruation, parenting, sexual assault, and other topics. They are created by women of color and NYC and other urban womn. The term "woman" applies to anyone who self-identifies as such.

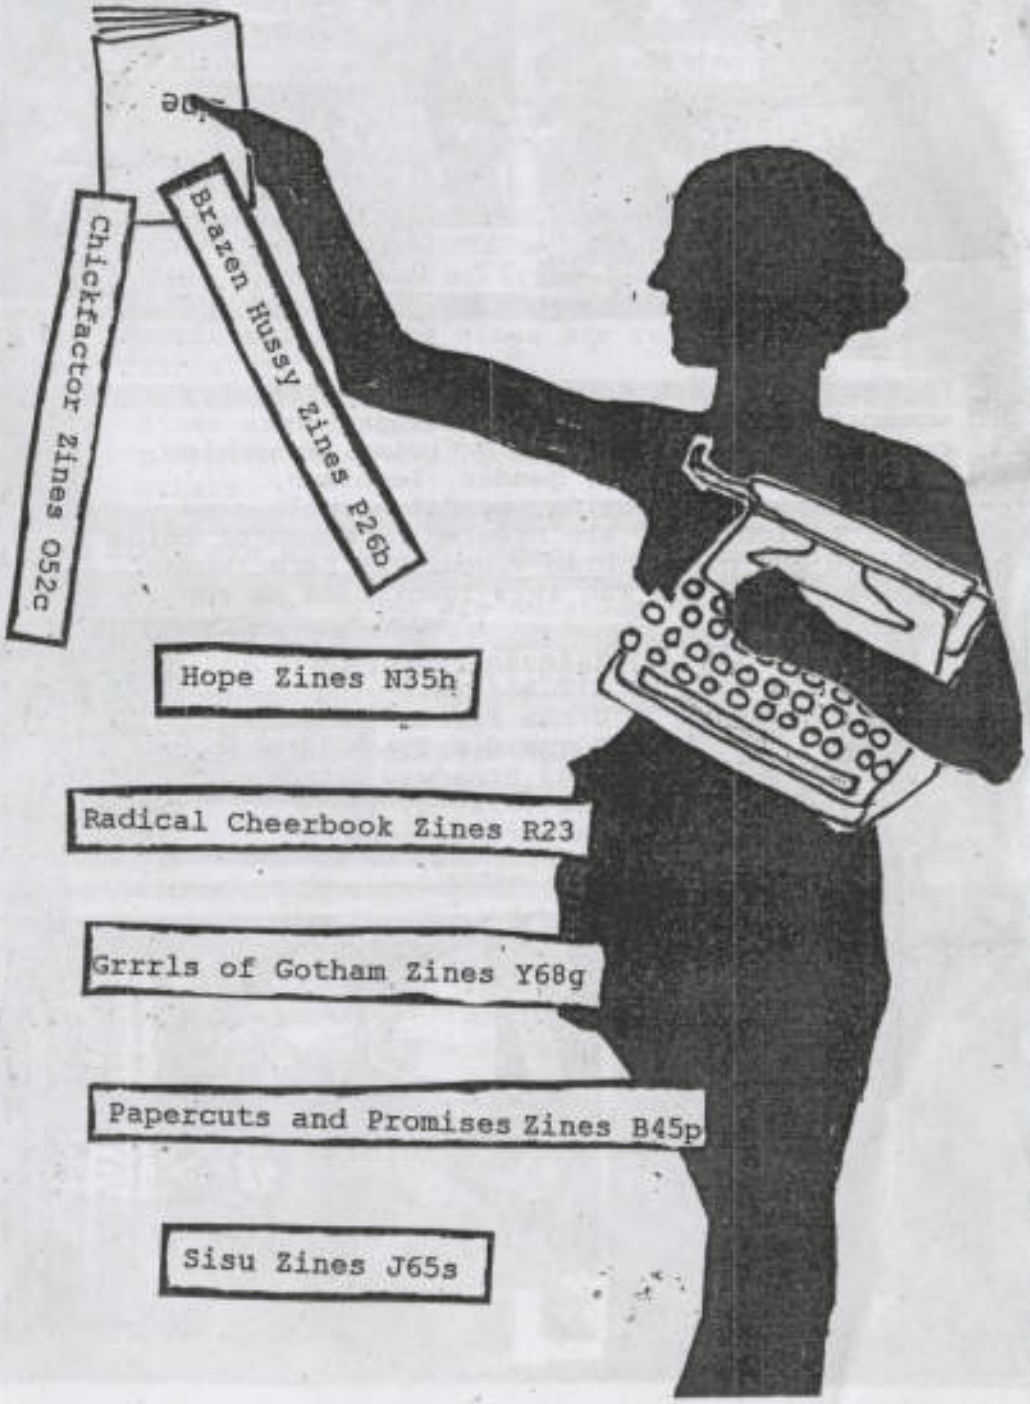
If your zine(s) fit the above policy, sell or donate 2 copies. (If we receive zines that don't fit the Collection Development parameters, we will donate them to another zine library unless you tell us not to.)

Come visit! (But you have to let us know first, or you might not get past security.)

E-mail: zines@barnard.edu
Phone: 212.854.4615
Address: Jenna Freedman
Barnard College Library
3009 Broadway
New York, NY 10027
AIM: BarnardLibJenna

www.barnard.edu/library/zines/

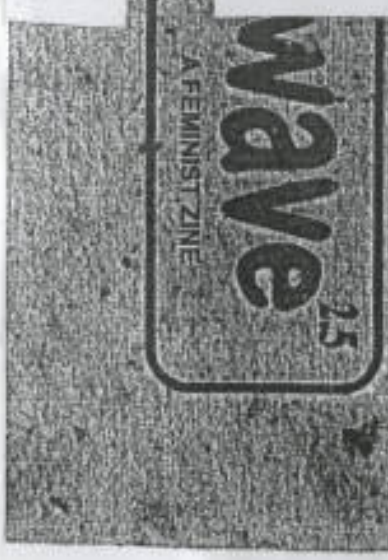
Barnard Zine Library Zine



Barnard zines are primarily in the area of women's studies, featuring personal and political publications on activism, anarchism, body image, feminism, gender, lesbians, menstruation, parenting, sexual assault, and other topics. They are created by women of color and NYC and other ubran women. The term "woman" applies to anyone who self-identifies as such.

E-mail: zines@barnard.edu
Phone: 212.854.4615
Address: Jenna Freedman
Barnard College Library
3009 Broadway
New York, NY 10027
AIM: BarnardLibJenna

LIBRARY BONNET
BARNARD
Zines
M355w
Winter



Zines ARE

- Zines are self-published works of personal expression.
- Zines are an alternative to the mainstream media.
- Zines are Do-It-Yourself (DIY).
- Zines are an underground culture.
- Zines are original, individual, unique, unusual, distinctive, different, idiosyncratic, innovative, singular, and more.
- Zines generally have small print runs and are usually produced at irregular intervals.
- People who produce zines are referred to as "zinesters."
- Zines are thought-provoking, insightful glimpses into the lives, minds and interests of others.
- Zines are excellent primary source materials.
- Zines are outsider art.
- Zines are made by people of all ages.

Zines ARE NOT

- Zines are not motivated by profit.
- Zines are not the creation of a corporate body or a government or any media conglomerate.
- Although "zine" is an abbreviated form of "magazine" or "fanzine," zines are not magazines, nor are they all about music or science fiction.
- Zines are limited only by the creator's own inhibitions, not by an editor or publisher.

DID YOU KNOW?

Barnard has over 2,000 zines in its collection, and we're always adding more!

Every zine in the collection was written by a woman (biological and transgendered)

Over 800 of our zines are available for check-out

Our collection, which began in 2003, is unique; it is one of the few zine libraries cataloged in OCLC's WorldCAT

Not every zine has been processed yet, so if you don't see something you want in the catalog or on the shelf, just ask! We might have it.

You can keep up to date on goings-on by reading our livejournal @ http://barnardzines.livejournal.com/

We want to help you enjoy zines AND use them in your research. Pick up our sister publication, Cite This Zine at the Library or download it from our website.

You can see lots o' fun pictures on Flickr: http://www.flickr.com/photos/barnardzinelibrary/ou can be our friend! Just check us out on:

rspace http://www.myspace.com/barnardzinelibrary
acebook http://www.facebook.com/pages/New-York-/Barnard-Library-Zine-Collection/47593715023

Got more questions? Read our comprehensive FAQ: http://www.barnard.edu/library/zines/FAQ.htm

ABOUT OUR COLLECTION

Barnard's zines are written by New York City and other urban women with an emphasis on zines by women of color. (In this case the word "woman" includes anyone who identifies as female and some who don't believe in binary gender.) The zines are personal and political publications on activism, anarchism, body image, third wave feminism, gender, parenting, queer community, riot grrrl, sexual assault, and other topics.

You can read all about us on the web at:
http://www.barnard.edu/library/zines

ACADEMICS SAY...

"Zines offer an atypical, non-traditional take on popular culture and give voice to the social and political perspectives of contemporary, non-mainstream society. The research potential of this material can never be explored or fulfilled if it is not collected, preserved and made accessible in some organized fashion." - Carol Falcione, Dean of Information Services at Barnard

STUDENTS SAY...

"Learning about zines has opened a new door in exploring media and art for me. Ever since I discovered the zine collection at Barnard, I have been thrilled to have it as a part of my library. Zines are an incredible resource for me as an activist, as a writer, and as a woman." - Jennie Rose Halperin, Barnard sophomore

USING OUR COLLECTION

Preservation and Access

Barnard aims to keep two copies of every zine we hold. One copy lives in the stacks and is open and available for anyone to read, borrow, and enjoy. Another copy lives in a temperature-controlled, acid-free archival environment and can only be viewed when you make an appointment with the Zine Librarian. Some of our zines live only in the archive because they are rare or because we only own one copy. For full details on where a zine is and how you can find it, check out our helpful tips on using our online catalog, CLIO, on the next page.

Accessing Zines

The Zine Collection is housed within the library, so our hours are the same as those for the rest of the 2nd floor.

The collection is available to individuals with a Barnard College, Columbia University, or affiliate ID. We think that zines are important cultural artifacts and research materials, as well as just being a pleasure to read. We are proud of our collection and want interested readers and researchers to have a look. If you are not associated with Barnard/Columbia and want to use the collection, contact Jenna Freedman at zines@barnard.edu or call 212.854.4615 to make an appointment. Don't let this intimidate you. Anyone can use the zine collection; we just need a little notice to get you into the library.

Borrowing Zines

Barnard and Columbia students, faculty and other affiliates are now able to borrow zines for four weeks, renewable ten times, as is the case with all circulating materials from the Barnard College Library. Just bring the zines you want to the circulation desk along with your ID. Some zines are even available for Inter-Library Loan. Just follow your institution's policies.

Finding Zines

Use our online public access catalog, CLIO (http://clio.cul.columbia.edu/webvoy.htm), to find zines following these simple steps:

FIVE STEPS TO FINDING ZINES

1 Decide if you want to search for a zine you alre know about, or if you want to browse zines on a certain subject. Click on "Title", "Author" or "Subject Heading" on the right, type your search terms in the box, and press "search"!

2 Your results page will look like this:

3 Read the brief description of the zine. If you wa to read a summary of the zine, just click on "Ful View" to get more information.

4 Note the call number and location of the zine.

5 Grab the zine off the shelf, or email zines@barnard.edu for help!

WHAT YOU'LL FIND:

COMIX like I Like Girls by Erika Moen and On Being Jealous of Invertebrates by Jess S.

ART ZINES like Chinese Sweatshop by Elsie Sampson and Mirror Tricks by Robin Hustle

COMPILATION ZINES like Hard as Nails: the Tough Girl Compilation Zine by Lauren Jade Martin and Ladyfriend: for Ladies and All Their Friends by Christa Donner

ANZINES like All Slay #3: The Sex Issue by Katy tevens and Judy! by Andrea Lawlor-Mariano

TERARY ZINES like Beautiful People by Heather mn and I Hear You Like Stories by Meg Favreau

Got a zine? Submit it! Just email the details to zines@barnard.edu

These are just a few of the vibrant and exciting titles we hold:

POLITICAL ZINES like Evolution of a Race Riot by Mimi Nguyen and Figure 8 by Krissy Durden

DIY ZINES like Dropping Out (for Students) by Cavegirl and SEEJ Operating Manual by SEEJ members

PERSONAL ZINES like Baby Girl by Lindsey Morrison and Fuck You, High School by Lauren Jade Martin and Glossolalia by Sarah Contrary and I Dreamed I Was Assertive by Celia C. Perez and I Was a Teenage Mormon by Caitlin and more!

MAMAZINES like East Village Inky by Ayun Halliday and The Future Generation by China Martens

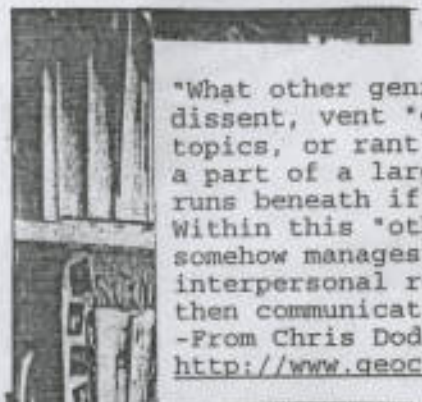
WHY ZINES MATTER



"What other genre is as apt to articulate popular dissent, vent "extreme" views, innocuously cover narrow topics, or rant incoherently as the zine?... zines are a part of a larger do-it-yourself movement, one that runs beneath if not counter to the prevailing currents. Within this "otherstream", the veritable zine community somehow manages to foster both individualism and interpersonal relations. Zines are produced and traded, then communication begins.
-From Chris Dodge's Zine-ography
http://www.geocities.com/SoHo/Cafe/7423/zineog2.html

"I'm not even trying to be dramatic, but to the world at large, I am a freak. My voice is downplayed, ignored and/or made into a joke in the mass of verbal and physical disapproval that bombards me every day when I leave the safety of my house or make the stupid decision to read a newspaper, magazine or turn the television on…I am told that my very existence is wrong or problematic because I am a fat, queer, mentally ill, politically radical woman with very little money and little to no regard for beauty standards and so on and so forth. But you know what? I am so NOT fucking SORRY…Besides, how else are these stories going to be documented?…these stories will most likely not be found in any future history books, and if they are, they will most likely be totally inaccurate…this is where I have chosen to start and it's something which is always better than nothing."
- Jenny San Diego. Not Sorry, #3. April, 2005, Portland, OR

Zines and Scholarship

Self-published zines, books, and films are unique ways that people have seized means of communication and created networks free of censorship by mainstream channels. These media construct and assert political identities such as race, gender, sexuality, and class, creating radical alternatives to mainstream media.

This is the spirit of the Do It Yourself ethos as it relates to cultural resistance. By envisioning and actively creating a world of human interactions and relationships to information according to a new model of liberatory culture, we replace the demonstration of what we are against with what we are for. The key to doing it yourself is to stop asking and start doing. Zines are a refutation, offering the option of creation instead of consumption, and talking back instead of passively absorbing information.

Information outside of the mainstream is vital to the shaping of history. Whether they happen through radical politics, grassroots people's movements, or dissident forms of culture, major changes in our society must not be understood as single, grand events. Change is a process, and its nascent forms warrant attention, documentation, and preservation.

Zines pose critical interventions and envision alternatives. Many explore the potential to change or affect the meanings of foundational structures such as identity and community. By talking about racial, gender, sexual, ethnic and class identity, political citizenship, and resistance inside the workplace, zine writers challenge the order of capitalist alienation, oppressive gender roles and political indifference imposed by addiction to mainstream culture and blind acceptance of social "truths." Sharing stories and offering realities with which to identify has the potential to create virtual and real communities based on shared values and experience.

--from a proposed syllabus, "Introduction to DIY Media"(2003), by Torie Quiñonez

BARNARD ZINE

BOOKS AND ZINES

Angel, Jen, and Jason Kucsma. Zine Yearbook. San Francisco: Become the Media, 1997-.
(call#: PN4878.3.Z567 1997g)

Block, Francesca Lia, and Hillary Carlip. Zine Scene. Los Angeles, CA: Girl Press, 1998.
(call #: PN4836.B58 1998)

Duncombe, Stephen. Notes from Underground: Zines and the Politics of Alternative Culture. London; New York: Verso, 1997.
(call #: PN4878.3 D86 1997)

Spencer, Amy. D.I.Y.: The Rise of Lo-Fi Culture. London; New York: Marion Boyars, 2005.
(call #: PN4836.S64 2005)

Taormino, Tristan, and Karen Green, eds. A Girl's Guide to Taking Over the World: Writings from the Girl Zine Revolution. New York: St. Martin's Griffin, 1997.
(call #: PS647.W6 G57 1997)

Todd, Mark and Esther Pearl Watson, eds. Whatcha Mean, What's a Zine? Boston, MA: Graphia, 2006.
(call #: Z286.Z54 T63 2006g)

Wrekk, Alex. Stolen Sharpie Revolution: A D.I.Y. Zine Resource, 3rd ed. Portland, OR: Microcosm Pub., 2003.
(call #: Zines W74s)

Zinesters Do It On The Photocopier
THE QUEER ZINE ARCHIVE PROJECT - WWW.QZAP.ORG

...And more! Just ask at the Reference Desk!

RESOURCES

WEBSITES

Barnard Library Zine Collection Homepage
http://www.barnard.edu/library/zines/index.ht

The Book of Zines
http://zinebook.com/

Independent Publishing Resource Center
http://www.iprc.org/

Queer Zine Archive Project
http://www.qzap.org

Zine World
http://www.undergroundpress.org/

VIDEOS

Biel, Joe, director. A Hundred Dollars and a T-shirt: A Documentary About Zines in the Northwest US. [videorecording]. Portland, OR: Microcosm Pub., 2004.
(call #: DVD PN5317.F35 H8 2004g

WHO WE ARE

There are many people whose work makes the Barnard Zine Library possible. Let's get to know them, shall we?

The Zine Librarian
Jenna Freedman created the zine library in 2003 and has served as the Zine Librarian ever since. Jenna's role is to shape and guide the collection through selection and purchasing, to create catalog records for the zines, to figure out how the Zine Collection fits into Barnard's Library as a whole, and to oversee the work of interns and assistants. She is the visionary behind the collection, and often speaks to groups about zines, independent publishing, and library collections.

The Zine Intern
Zine Interns come to Barnard every semester from a variety of graduate programs around the city including Library and Information Science. The Zine Intern works on projects in conjunction with the Zine Librarian which help improve access to the collection, preservation of the collection, and other tasks of high priority.

The Zine Assistant
Undergraduate students at Barnard are hired semester-to-semester to work as Zine Assistants. The job of the Zine Assistant is to process zines for inclusion in the collection. This involves reading zines, writing abstracts for CLIO, and creating labels for zines. The Zine Assistant also works to keep the stacks orderly through shelf-reading.

And you! The Zine Reader
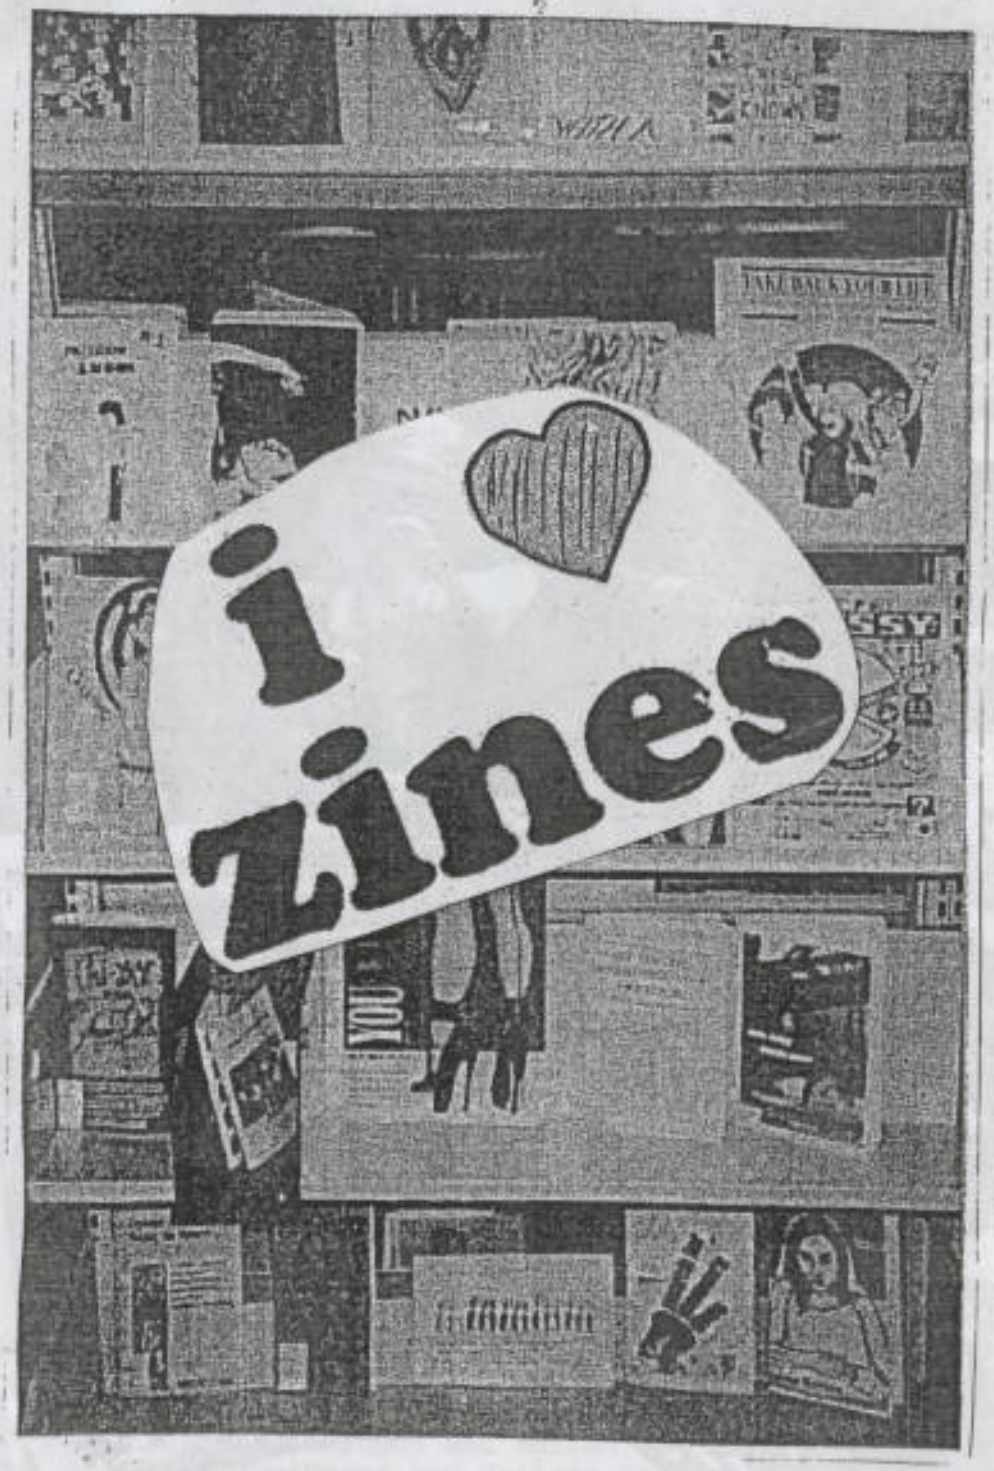
Without readers, zines and zine libraries couldn't exist. We love to learn more about our readers and patrons. Send us an email and introduce yourself! We're zines@barnard.edu - who are you?

The Barnard Zine Library Zine was created by Alexa B. Antopol and edited by Jenna Freedman, Torie Quiñonez and Melissa Jones.

© 2008, Barnard College Library



www.barnard.edu/library/zines/